ST HYDROC'S CHURCH

St Hydroc's church is the parish church for the community of Lanhydrock. The present building dates back to the 15th century, although there was a place of worship on the site prior to that. Services are held every Sunday using liturgy from the Book of Common Prayer. The church contains some fine stained glass and is open to visitors during the day when the National Trust property is open. The visitors' book is testament to the fact people find it a place where they can sit, relax and find some peace and quiet.

WELCOME TO LANHYDROCK

A rural parish steeped in history located 3-4 miles to the south of Bodmin, Lanhydrock is a sparsely populated rural parish which was historically centred around Lanhydrock House. Predominately a farming area it is criss-crossed with footpaths and cycle paths accessing ancient burial mounds, a nature reserve, countryside and riverside walks. There are places where dogs will need to be kept on leads as the tracks pass through fields with livestock.

LANHYDROCK HOUSE

Lanhydrock is a Victorian family home in a Jacobean mansion, surrounded by glorious gardens, an ancient estate and exciting cycling trails. In the house you'll see the elegant luxury of the family rooms contrasted with the staff quarters and kitchens which reveal the servants' daily lives. There are regular tours of the garden, which is full of colour all year round and famous for its magnolia collection and there are waymarked routes for exploring the estate, where dogs are welcome.

There is a café near the carpark and a tea-room and restaurant by the mansion and a fabulous gift shop and second-hand book shop here as well. www.nationaltrust.org.uk/lanhydrock

NATURE RESERVE

Redmoor, part of Helman Tor Nature Reserve, is Cornwall Wildlife Trust's largest inland nature reserve. At 217 hectares and spread over five separate sites it occupies a large proportion of the land you can see immediately around Helman Tor. The nature reserve is one of the wildlife gems of Cornwall. Much of it is a Site of Special Scientific Interest. The mosaic of different types of habitat and particularly the areas of wet and dry heathland and the wetland areas are what make the nature reserve so valuable. Much of the site was mined for tin in the past and it was this activity which has helped to make the site so rich in wildlife.
